It typically operates by monitoring glucose levels continuously through a sensor placed under the skin, usually on the abdomen. This sensor measures glucose levels in the interstitial fluid, providing real-time data on blood sugar trends. Once the sensor detects changes in glucose levels, it transmits this information to a receiver or a smartphone app, allowing users to track their levels throughout the day. Additionally, the Sugar Defender can provide alerts when glucose levels are too high or too low, helping users take prompt action to maintain their levels within a healthy range. Some advanced models of the Sugar Defender may also incorporate additional features such as predictive algorithms that forecast potential blood sugar fluctuations based on past trends, meal inputs, and</li> </ul>
