- [H3] Myth 1: The Second Amendment guarantees an individual's right to own guns.
- [H3] Fact: While the Second Amendment does protect the right to bear arms, it is important to note that this right is not unlimited. The Supreme Court has upheld restrictions on certain types of firearms and regulations on who can possess them. The amendment was intended to ensure that states could maintain militias for defense, not to give individuals unrestricted access to weapons.
- [H3] Myth 2: The First Amendment gives people the right to say whatever they want.
- [H3] Fact: While the First Amendment does protect freedom of speech, there are limitations to this right. Speech that incites violence, is defamatory, or poses a clear and present danger is not protected. Additionally, the government can regulate commercial speech, obscenity, and other categories of speech deemed harmful. The First Amendment is meant to promote open dialogue and the exchange of ideas, but it does not provide a blank check for any and all types of speech.
- [H3] Myth 3: The Fourth Amendment only protects against

		illegal searches and seizures by the government. <ul style="list-style-type: none">• [H3] Fact: The Fourth Amendment does indeed protect individuals from unreasonable searches and seizures by the government, but it also applies to private citizens. This means that private individuals, such as employers or landlords, cannot conduct searches or seizures that violate a person's reasonable expectation of privacy. The amendment is designed to safeguard against arbitrary invasions of privacy and to ensure that individuals are protected from unjustified government intrusion.• [H3] Myth 1: The Bill of Rights grants rights to the people.• [H3] Fact: The Bill of Rights does not grant rights to the people; rather, it recognizes and protects rights that are inherent to individuals. These rights are considered fundamental and are not subject to government interference. The amendments serve as a check on government power and work to ensure that individual liberties are preserved.• [H3] Myth 2: The Bill of Rights only applies to citizens of the United States.• [H3] Fact: The Bill of Rights applies to all individuals within the jurisdiction of the United States, not just citizens. This means that non-citizens, including immigrants, are entitled to the same constitutional protections as citizens when they are on American soil. The rights outlined in the Bill of Rights are considered universal and are extended to all individuals, regardless of their citizenship status.• [H3] Myth 3: The Bill of Rights is a static document that cannot be interpreted in new contexts.• [H3] Fact: The Bill of Rights is a living document that has been subject to interpretation and application in various contexts throughout history. The Supreme Court has played a crucial role in interpreting the amendments to address modern issues and societal changes. The principles enshrined in the Bill of Rights remain relevant today, and their application continues to evolve as new challenges arise.
